Bank M&A Review

2014 and Q1 2015

After much speculation that a wave of increased deal activity in the industry was nearing, acquisition data for 2014 and the first quarter of 2015 indicate a return to pre-recession levels by some metrics. 2014 saw 289 bank and thrift transactions announced, similar to the 2005 to 2007 level. Unlike during the pre-recession period, however, deal values have been relatively low, as the uptick in transaction volume has been concentrated among smaller banks. Aggregate deal value for 2014 was about $$ 20$ billion, well below pre-recession levels and barely higher than deal values over the 2009 to 2013 period (Figure 1).

Transaction volume for the smallest banks (those with less than $$ 500$ million in assets) has returned to pre-recession levels and represented more than $75 \%$ of the transactions announced in 2014 (Figure 2).

For banks with more than $$ 500$ million in assets, transaction volume has remained concentrated among the community banks (Figure 3). Deal activity in 2014 among banks with assets from $$ 500$ million to $$ 1$ billion well exceeded prior high levels, and activity among banks with $$ 1$ to $$ 5$ billion in assets has trended up since recession lows, as well. Among the largest banks, few deals have been announced since 2008.

Deal pricing also has posted some recoveries over the past several years, but pricing is restrained relative to pre-2008 terms primarily due to lower ROTCE (Figure 4). The median price to tangible common book value multiple has ticked up from $110 \%$ in 2011 to $141 \%$ for deals announced year-to-date in 2015 (through March 24), but is well below the pre-recession levels when median prices exceed $200 \%$ of ( 2003 to 2007).

As shown in Figure 5, larger community banks commanded higher premiums to book value than the smallest banks. For banks with more than $$ 5$ billion in assets, transaction volume was too low (with only three such deals announced in 2014) to make meaningful pricing comparisons.

Figure 6 summarizes transaction activity by region. The Midwest saw the greatest number of deals announced in 2014, but the average deal size was much smaller than in the other regions. The West and Mid-Atlantic by contrast saw fewer deals but deal activity generally involved larger banks. Deal pricing was fairly even across the regions, generally in the $135 \%$ to $140 \%$ of tangible book range, with somewhat more modest price/tangible book value multiples in the Mid-Atlantic region.

For the first quarter of 2015, pricing seems consistent with the trend observed through 2014, as shown in Figure 4. While the number of deals announced in first quarter 2015 represents a slowdown from 2014 trends, aggregate deal value is up significantly, due to one large transaction (Figure 7). In January 2015, Royal Bank of Canada announced an acquisition of City National Corp., priced at $$ 5.3$ billion. According to SNL Financial, the announced deal value represents approximately $260 \%$ of tangible book value and $23 x$ earnings for the $$ 33$ billion asset company, which also has $$ 48$ billion of client assets under management within its various wealth management units. 2014 saw only two acquisitions announced with deal values over $$ 1$ billion. Utah-based CIT Group announced an acquisition of California-based OneWest in a July 2014 deal valued at $$ 3.4$ billion, and BB&T announced an acquisition of Susquehanna in a November 2014 deal valued at $$ 2.5$ billion.

Deal consideration from 2014 through first quarter 2015 (through March 24) has primarily consisted of cash-only deals or some mix of cash and stock (Figure 8).

Figure 7: 2014 / Q1 2015 Aggregate Deal Value & Number of Deals

Deal volume in 2015 is expected to be facilitated in part by stronger industry profitability and credit quality metrics, which open the door for more potential acquirers and also reduce uncertainty about potential targets. Improved bank stock pricing likewise improves deal currency, increasing the base of potential acquirers. Going forward, deal activity is expected to continue to be dominated by acquisitions and mergers of smaller banks, as elevated compliance costs, pressure on returns and ZIRP (zero interest rate policies) weigh heavily on these smaller institutions.

An Introduction to

Business Development Companies
In the hunt for yield, investors are increasingly setting their sights on business development companies (BDCs), which offer public equity investors access to portfolios of private equity investments. This webinar explored the features that have contributed to the growth in BDCs, underlying asset classes to which BDCs offer investors exposure, and highlighted the key performance metrics for evaluating BDCs. Our panel discussed relevant regulatory developments affecting BDCs, reviewed the portfolio valuation procedures and assumptions that influence quarterly profits, and explored the relative performance of key market benchmarks.
